FRIDAY EVEN'G., SEPTEMBER 25.

Doctors in Russia. - A night medical service has just been organized at St. Petersburg by the medical men of that city; an arrangement which meets a real want of the public of the Russian capital, who, however, had hitherto not taken the necessary steps to provide it. Russia medical legislation does not allow liberty of work to medical men, who, when required either by a sick person or any one beheving himself to be ill, are not permitted to refuse help. The physician, surgeon, accou-cheur, midwife, of assistant who should either refuse to act when called on, or neglect to do so, is punished by a fine on the first occasion of from five to ten roubles (17s. 6d. to 35s.); on the second occasion of from ten to fifteen, and the third time from 50 to 100 roubles; while the physicians and surgeons who are in government employ may be deprived of their office. These laws are sanctioned by usage, and no later than this year two Russian physicians were tried for an infraction of this law, and one of them condemned for having refused to afford assistance to an invalid during the night. The Courier Medical Russe, whence we obtain our information, insists on the necessity of abolishing these coercive measures directed against medical men; the more so that at the present time everything relating to the public health in Russia is regulated by municipalities in cities, and by territorial, cantomal and departmental councils in the provinces. . The same journal also urges that in England custom no longer santions coorceive laws directed against medical men, while in Prussia they were erased from the statute book in 1869.
